

Thank you for contacting Frito-Lay. The cheese in Nacho Cheese Doritos seasoning is made with a non-porcine animal enzyme.

A number of our cheese seasonings are made with animal enzymes. If you want to avoid these enzymes, you might want to avoid our snacks that list "cheese" and "whey" as ingredients. Only a few snacks have animal flavors and they will always be listed on the ingredient statement, never hidden under "natural flavors."

We have a list of kosher snacks on our website. All the snacks listed are free of animal enzymes and flavors. You'll find it in the "Your Health" section, under "For Special Dietary Needs."

Our non-seasoned, salted-only snacks, such as Lay's Classic, Ruffles Original, Fritos, Santitas, Tostitos, Original SunChips and Rold Gold Classic Style Pretzels, do not have enzymes of any kind.

Second response from Frito-Lay

There are no pig enzymes used for the cheese seasoning in Nacho Cheese Doritos or Doritos Locos Tacos. We are unable provide the source of our animal enzymes, but we can confirm that it is not from pig.

Best regards,

Linda
Frito-Lay Consumer Relations
011924452A